

Digital Television is supposed to be an improvement for consumers over existing broadcast TV. If home users' rights are restricted beyond what they are used to (and demand) with conventional TV, users will not switch to Digital. Why pay extra for a service that gives you fewer capabilities? Home users demand the ability to "videotape" and playback (and maybe even lend tapes to their friends who missed a show.)